R FIGURE 4 shows an alternative application of the security and surveillance system 10 of FIGURE 1. A recording device 70, such as a videocassette recorder, may be coupled to television monitor 36 and the camera signal from camera switcher 38. Recording device 70 provides recording of images from cameras 20, 22, 24, and 26 for later playback in lieu of real time monitoring on television monitor 36. Recording device 70 may also record images displayed by television monitor 36. Recording device 70 may be controlled by a secondary emitter 72 in a similar manner as secondary emitter 62 controls television monitor 36.

A recording device 70 may be used in the embodiment of FIGURE 3. Processor 40 may have a fourth mode that implements recording device 70. In a record mode, processor 40 commands recording device 70 through secondary emitter 72 to activate and record images from a triggered zone of surveillance. The record mode may be included with the alert mode of processor 40 previously described. A
